After half of the world has held its breath because the production of the popular Shanti chimes stopped, the new types of Zaphir and Koshi are now heralding a new era. Zaphir has been faithful to the Shanti archetype and shines in the familiar bright colours, whereas Koshi has chosen a new direction: the clear simplicity of nature. These new models are made from natural bamboo, have a larger resonating chamber and come in 4 tunings corresponding to the 4 elements.

Anyone choosing between the chimes is spoiled for choice – each one has its own unique beauty. To compare them is a challenge as colourful design and sound creations please the eye and ear alike. Just come round and try yourself!
